

TWO NEW PLAYS
SEEM TO PLEASE

"Girls Will Be Girls" Goes with a Real Rush at First Performance in Fourteenth Street Theatre.

BRADY OBJECTS TO
"OFFENSIVE ENCORES."

"The White Tigress of Japan" Thrills Audience at the American—"In Dahomey" Gets a Warm Welcome at the Grand.

Three theatres were jammed to doors which re-opened for the season on Saturday night.

Slightly tanned after their summer's vacation, and wearing besides that unmistakable air which comes of mixing with royalty, those representatives of the colored aristocracy of the stage, the Williams and Walker folk, renewed acquaintances with Americans at the Grand Opera-House. So many of their admirers came to greet them that Treasurer Douglass was obliged to work Sunday counting money.

"In Dahomey" has been changed considerably, several new specialties having been added, but the chief feature as before is the inimitable drollery of big, awkward Bert Williams. He has the immense audience in his mirth, doing violence to the chair-arms. He has a new song, "I May Be Crazy, but I Ain't No Fool," which, while rather funny, is not as good as "The Medicine Man," and his "Jonah" lament.

This best of "colored" shows will remain at the Grand for two weeks.

"Girls Will Be Girls." In which Al. Leach is made a "star," went with such a rush from start to finish that it was easy to see Mr. Brady had used his "mob" methods in rehearsing the company. There wasn't a breathing spell in the whole three acts, but the performers didn't seem to mind, and the audience gave every sign of enjoyment.

"The Three Rosebuds," Miss Roma Snyder, Gladys Claire and Christine Cook, young women who are quaintly funny and sing surprisingly well, are the best part of the show.

"The White Tigress of Japan" broke loose at the American Theatre. It broke over at Grandland, and with a leap it was all off at the American. Fanny McIntyre played the title role and from the time she made her appearance in the first act with a leopard's skin thrown over her bare shoulders, like a female Hercules, and with a baby leopard in her arms—there was "something doing," and plenty of it. Just why the leopard's skin wasn't quite clean, but no matter. The White Tigress was a success.

The play is more thrilling than newspaper drawings of the Japanese-Russian war, and it not only brings to the front Japanese and Russian soldiers, but it announces the birth of the new era. Written in on the spur of the moment, you know. Yes, really.

100 IN BRONX
HAVE TYPHOID

Health Board Physicians Are Trying to Trace Source of Infection and Are Greatly Puzzled.

There is an epidemic of typhoid fever in the Bronx which has filled the Fordham Hospital to overflowing and has made it necessary to transfer many of the patients not suffering from typhoid to the Harlem Hospital and Bellevue.

Medical Inspector Elliott, of the Board of Health, has been conducting an investigation to determine the cause of the outbreak. He has made an analysis of the milk supply and of the water in about fifty wells in the Bronx, but has thus far been unable to find any typhoid bacilli. He has been assisted in his inquiry by Dr. T. Joseph Dunn, visiting physician at the Fordham Hospital, and by Dr. Gregory, acting superintendent of Bellevue and the allied hospitals. The source of the epidemic is still a mystery.

Dr. Gregory has ordered tents to be erected at the Fordham Hospital to help accommodate the overflow, and the erection of the tents will be begun this morning. A majority of the typhoid fever patients are Italian.

It is estimated that all told in the Bronx there are about 100 cases of the disease. Fordham Hospital has had twenty cases, and one physician alone has reported sixteen private patients. Several cases have resulted fatally.

"We think the necessary steps have been taken to prevent the further spread of the disease by infection," said Inspector Elliott. "It is not contagious. We shall continue to search for the source of the epidemic."

LITTLE ONES WAIT
FOR QUEEN TITANIA

Royal Ruler Will Open the Carnival at Asbury Park To-Night That Starts the Four-Day Beach Festival.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 28.—The arrival of Queen Titania this evening will mark the opening of the children's carnival here. The approach of the royal party will be announced by mounted heralds at the various coast resorts. The queen is Miss Edith Fleming Reeves, of Philadelphia, and the members of her court are: Princess Charming, Miss Marcelle Hamilton Goodrich, of Baltimore; maids of honor, Katherine M. Nippes, of Orange; Catherine C. Minden, of Brooklyn; Agnes Fell, of Orange; Frankie Johnson, of New York; Isabel R. Gregory, of New York; Edith M. Mercer, of New York; Mary B. Smith, of Asbury Park; and Helen J. Schroder, of Mechanicsburg, Pa.

The coronation will take place in the beach auditorium palace and will be the occasion for a gorgeous display. It will be followed by a court ball in the auditorium.

To-morrow evening Queen Titania gives the city over to Puck, the court jester. There will be a grand march on the board walk and masked dances will be held at all the leading hotels, which will be visited in turn by the Queen and her retinue.

The busy parade will take place on Wednesday, and it is expected that the pageant will surpass any before attempted. The prizes, most of which are articles of silverware, are valued at more than $2,000. A Venetian carnival on Deal Lake on Thursday evening will end the festival.

MAN FATALLY SHOT IN DOOR OF HOME

Charles Miner Dies as Result of Three Gunshot Wounds, and Edward Hendry Is Held for the Coroner.

Charles Miner, twenty-seven years old, of No. 236 Madison street, died in Gouverneur Hospital to-day as the result of three gunshot wounds, inflicted, according to the police, by Edward Hendry, of No. 83 Madison street, the driver of an insurance patrol wagon.

Miner and Hendry were drinking up to an early hour yesterday morning. Several times they got quarrelling and only the interference of their friends prevented violence. Finally Miner wased of the bickering and went home.

An hour later, some one knocked at his door, and when he responded three shots were fired at him. One struck him on the cheek, another entered his forehead and the third fractured his right arm. His assailant got away, but later Hendry was arrested. When searched a pistol was found in his possession. Hendry was arraigned in court to-day and held for the coroner.
